SOME QUESTIONS.

Some important questions that need answers:

Are the public roads of Cumberland county intended to be used by the public? If so do horse-back riders, buggies, one-horse and teams necessarily have to abandon roads and go to the ditches or woods on approaching autos? They take all. Should we not have some law compelling all autos to give at least room enough for the different mail carriers to deposit mail in boxes that are along our public highways? Or would it be better for our inhabitants to move to some secluded part of the county, turn the roads, mail routes and transaction of business in general over to auto pleasure seekers, who have retired from all business and gone into wholesale auto driving?.

BILBREY BROTHERS

COW-BELLS A PUBLIC NUISANCE

One of the first steps towards making our town, a city, is to pass an ordinance prohibiting our cows wearing bells. Those bells are true label of a country town. We could put up with the fad if it were not for the noise. Just imagine yourself trying to sleep on a hot summer night, when there are about twenty cows grazing on the vacant lot or street corner under your window; each cow wearing a bell, and each bell clanging and clinking in twenty different sharps and flats. I tell you friends, this is nerve racking.

Now if there is to be all this noise and glamor in a town let it be from the wheels of industry, from the factory and foundry. For that means something worth while. Perhaps our neighbors have never thought on this subject or realized before, that their cows and bells could be a source of annoyance to us. But they are, and we take this way of asking you to please remove the bells from the cows or remove the cows to a far distant pasture. A word to the wise is sufficient.
